MONEY IS THE TALK

Opening of the International Monetary Conference.

WELCOME TO THE DELEGATES

M. Montefore Levi Presides-Dr. Svetbeer's Nine Propositions to Be Considered by the Delegates.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22 .- The international metary conference opened here today. It is one of the most important international conventions of recent years and the outcome of its delibersne will be anxiously awaited in financial circles the world over. No formality attended the assembling of the delegates, although a large crowd mbled on the outside of the state ispartment for the purpose of catching a glimpee of the distinguished men om abroad as they left their carriages and ascended the marble steps. The large audience chamber of the department had been selected for the pur-poses of the gathering. The delegates arrived in two and threes and were made acquainted one with another. The delegates from the United States were ate in arriving. Senator Allison of lows, and Congressman McCreary of Kentucky, came in together, and President Andrews of Brown university; Senator Jones of Nevada and H. W. Cannon of New York came in soon

Other Nations Represented.

The other nations represented were England, France, Germany, Italy, Austra-Hungary, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, Greece, Roumania, Portugal, Spain, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Norway. The delegates from Canada had not put in an appearance at the opening of the conference. The German delegation was a distinguished one, comprising Count von Alvensieben, the German minister to Belgium; Dr. von Glaschap, chief of the imperial treasury department, and Hierr Hertung, director of the Reichbank. Other Nations Sepresented.

The delegates were welcomed by M. Beermart, prime minister and minister of finance, and having performed that duty he excused himself from further attendance for the time being on account of pressing business in the chamber of deputies. Stok Individual Interests,

M. Monteflore Levi, as president of the conference, followed M. Beernaert. He referred to the numerous attempts made to solve the monerary question, mentioning specially the British gold and silver commission of 1885 as dis-tinguished above all similar bodies by its eminently practical character. The worst feature of the present monetary system was its instability. He hoped the conference would sink its individual interests and keep in view the higher interest of the great human family. E. Terrell, United States minister to Belgium, replied in a few formal words on behalf of the American delegates. The conference then adjourned until Friday.

It was announced by the English

Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, they would regard the conference as a purely deliberative body, and would be without the power to commit their government to any position that the delegate that in accordance with in-structions from Sir William Vernon majority may desire to take. The American delegates were then invited to state the proposals they desired submitted for discussion, and a com-mittee was appointed to prepare a definite plan of procedure.

BIG FOUR OPERATIONS. General Ramsey Thinks They Are Ask-

ing a Little Too Much. CINCINNATI, Nov. 22 .- The telegraph operators employed on all the important railway systems are just now be-surring themselves. General Manager Rammay of the Big Four has had a conference with a grievance committee rep ring the operators employed on that system and will reply to their de-mands on the 30th. Mr. Rameny is of the opinion, that as is usually the case, the men have asked more than they really expect to get.
"We met the committee as employee of our company, not as representatives of the railread telegraph operators.

Graver Steals Away.

Naw Your, Nov. 22-Mr. Cleveland left the city very quietly at 8 o'clock this evening. He was driven in a closed carriage fr m his residence in West Fifty-first street ferry and prossed to be New Bern, N. C., but as the train which he took has no southern connection, it is thought that he will stop at Old Point Comfort on the way.

HYPNOTIC POWER.

How the Snake and the Tiger Benumb

The power attributed to the snake and feline families of "charming" their victims seems to me past dispute, says a writer in the Minnespolis Tribune. is merely a sort of hypnotism. Livingstone tells us that when at one time seized by a tiger he felt neither terror nor pain; all his senses seemed to be benumbed. Bates in his "Naturaliston the Amazon" states that one day in the woods a small pet dog flew at a large rattlesnake. The snake fixed his eyes on the dog, erected his tail, and shook his rattle; it seemed in an haste to seize the dog, but as if waiting to put the dog into a more suitable condition for being seized. As to the dog, it neither continued the attack nor retreated, could not or would not more when called, and was with difficulty dragged away by his master.

I have seen ous case of a snake charming a hird, but I had a better opportunity to study a cat charming a bird, and probably the process is much silke is both. The cat placed itself on the outside sill of my window, near to a nine tree. A bird presently lit on the pine tree, no doubt not observing the theatre in Newport tonight Jimmy O'Conneil knocked Temmy Foley one cleanly with a swinging blow in the The cat fixed its attention on the bird. The cat's eyes were widely open and shone with a peculiar brightness; its head was raised and intent, the fur on its neck and about its face slowly stood up as if electrified. Except for this rising of the fur and a certain inthe beast it was as still as if cut from stone. The bird quivered, trembled, looked fixedly at the cat, and finally with a feeble shake of the wings fell toward the cat, which bounded to seize

A lady tells me that she "does not be lieve cuts can churm birds because she has seen a cat trying to charm a parrot, and the bird, greatly alarmed, scolded loudly." This proves nothing. The parrot in general, or, more probably, that particular parrot, did not prove a good subject for the mesmeric power. have seen people who cannot be hypnotized; they resent the effort and nervous action becomes intensified.

CURIOUS JAPANESE CUSTOMS. Some of Their Quaint and Queer Ways at

"The Japanese are the quaintest peo-ple on earth," said M. Hutton, of San Francisco. "They are as versatile as the French and imitative as the negroes. Since the introduction into Japan of American ideas and thrift they have been striving bard to adopt our way of living and acting in all particulars, but they are so thoroughly grounded in their old customs and manserisms-which you know is almost a complete reversal of everything Caucasian-that, with all their sprightliness and ambition, several generations yet will perhaps pass away before the revolution now in progress in the country will be complete.

"It sounds ridiculous to you that any same human being should give expression to poignant grief by loud and rol-licking laughter. But that's just what the Japanese do. I have seen a whole room full of mourners in Yokohams and other cities of the empire in the ec stasy of joy instead of convulsions of grief, as with us. Their peals of laugh-ter were a little hysterical, but all the same they laughed. And when a child is born to a Japanese household the im-portant event is heralded to the community by the loud cries and wails of the father and by a bountiful supply of crape on the front door. However, more advanced few among them are discarding these strange ancient customs, and are adopting our ways, even in this particular."

HE WAS CURIOUS.

And He Received His Money's Worth o

A well-known newspaper man, whose custom it is to take long walks in the suburbs, one day, as he passed an orchard, noticed all the trees but one were well filled with apples.

"That's strange," he remarked to his companion, a brother journalist.
"What's the reason, do you imagine?" asked the other.

"Here comes a boy, I'll ask him;" and the journalist tackled the boy.
"Fine apples you have," he said, with an air of freedom and acquaintance with the facts. "They are so," replied the boy. "Where do you sell them mostly?" "We don't sell 'em. Make cider."

"Course; couldn't make cider if they

"Very true. By the way, my boy, I notice one tree over there by the fence hasn't an apple on it. Do you know why that is? "Of course I do."

"Well, my friend here and I are a little curious, and would like you to tell us, if you will. Here's a lime for your trouble and loss of time." "Certainly. It's 'cause it's a pear tree, mostly." The man of inquiring mind hung his head and went on with a firm resolve to refrain from curiosity in the future.

The Genuine and the Sham.

Every good thing has its host of imitators; every genuine article its coun-terfeits. The imitat rs always choose the most valuable and popular article to counterfer, so that when they claim their sham to be equal, or as good, or the same as "So-and-So's," the public may depend upon it that "So-and-So's" article is the best of the kind. The sham proves the genuine mert of the thing it copies and never has this been better illustrated than by the im-itations of Allenck's Porous Plasters. Allcock's Por us Piaster is the standard of excellence the world over, and its imitators in their cry that there is "as good as Alloock's," are only em-phasizing this fact and admitting "Alicock's" to be the same of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. The difference between the genuine and these imitations, which copy only general appearance, is as wife as that between copper and gold.

The only safe way for purchasers is to always insist upon having Allcock's Porous Plasters. They are the only perfect plasters ever produced.
